In this country, remarks an exchange, comparative few people harbor that troublesome parasite the tapeworm. Americans are no lovers of raw meats—the common source of infection. There are a number of drugs held to possess qualities destructive to tapeworms, but most of them have been proved unreliable. Attention has been called to cocooni as a vermifuge. Professor Parvi of Athens, when he was in Abyssinia, happened to discover that ordinary cocooni possesses vermifuge qualities in a high degree. He took, one day, a quantity of the juice and pulp, and shortly afterward felt some gastric disturbance which, however, passed off in a few hours. Subsequently he had diarrhea and was surprised to find that there had been expelled a complete tapeworm, head and all, quite dead. After returning to Athens he made a number of observations which were most satisfactory, the tapeworm being always passed and quite dead. He orders the milk and pulp of one cocooni to be taken early in the morning fasting, no purgative or confinement to the house being required. A correspondent writes to the Pharmaceutical Journal that the cocooni has been used as a vermifuge in India for probably 40 generations by the bee-eaters of the country, and is so well known there as a means of expelling the flat worm that he cannot conceive how information of the fact has not reached England before. When properly prepared and intelligently administered, he says it is equally efficacious with male fern, kousso, pomegranate root, turpentine, etc., while it is as pleasant for the palate as they are offensive.

Reno Gazette: The First National Bank contracted with George E. Holmworth yesterday to build a two-story brick building 40x60 in the rear of the bank building. This is the ninth big brick that is going up in Reno right away, and more to hear from.

Silver State: Wednesday Garnett and Ryan, the men who assaulted Deputy Sheriff Nofsinger night before last, were sentenced by Justice Archer to four months' imprisonment in the County Jail. The men were discharged from jail the day on which they assaulted Mr. Nofsinger.

Last Monday a subscription list was set in circulation for the family of David Davis, recently killed in a Pioche mine, and during the week the sum of $310 was subscribed for their benefit, and the amount will reach $350 before the list is closed. Nearly every miner has contributed, the average sum each being $3.

Clifton Clarion: The editor of a country newspaper will grant more favors without pay or thanks in a month than any other business man in a year. It is also a well established fact that he will receive more all round cussing in a week than any other man in his lifetime. That's the reason he is not afraid of hell.

The wonderful performance of the City of Paris in beating the record of all other steamers, which serve as bridges to unite the Old with the New World causes us to give a description of this floating palace and Ocean greyhound:

She is of 10,500 tons burden, 560 feet long, 63½ feet beam and 59 feet depth from top of upper cabins to keel. The distance from keel to bridge, 70 feet, gives one some idea of the immensity of this vessel, as it is the height of a seven story building with ceilings ten feet apart. Another feature which shows her immense length is that the promenade deck, open from stem to stern, gives a walking circuit of 1120 feet, or a distance of nearly three blocks, each of 400 feet in length. The vessel can carry 1871 passengers.

The amount of fuel that is shoveled into the maw of this ship when in motion is something enormous. She consumes a ton of coal—which would last some families a month—every five minutes, or twelve tons an hour, or 283 tons a day, and in six days and fifteen hours, the time of her first trip across, she would burn about 2000 tons.

A side of the rudder contains 250 square feet, which is, of course, under water. The steering gear is moved by hydraulic machinery, and is controlled from the bridge. The turning of the twin screws in opposite directions also forms a powerful auxiliary to the rudder.

The interior arrangements and fittings are on a scale equal to that on which the ship is built. The main saloon is covered by an iron arched double roof fifty-three feet long and twenty-five feet wide, the inside being of stained glass. Between the two are myriads of incandescent lights. At night the outer roof is closed by iron shutters, and the saloon illuminated. The pantry adjoins the saloon, and in the bulkhead between the two are sliding doors. The kitchen is below the pantry, and away down in the hold is the icehouse.

The ladies drawing room is above the main saloon and opens into it. The port holes in this drawing room are closed by two slides. The one used at night exposes a mirror; the one in the day time stained glass. Then there is a library, and on the spar deck is the smoking room, where nearly 200 persons can be accommodated. It is finished with a tile floor, and its seats are covered with red leather. Indeed it forms rather a coffee room such as would be found in a club house than a smoking room on a ship.

The state rooms are in sections of twenty-four each, the finest having a bathroom attached, while there are bathrooms for general use. Some of the rooms are in suites. In all of them there are patent ventilators, the air being forced down from above. There is a second cabin, where there are no suites, but the rooms are quite as handsome as those in the first cabin. There is a "roosting chamber" for any who cannot stand the motion of the ship. It is shaped something like the figure 8. It holds 200 tons of water, and is half filled. When the ship rolls the water runs to the downward side, but when the steamer has rooled as far as it will go in one direction, the water does not cease running at once, but resists the roll in the other direction. The City of New York and the City of Paris are much alike in construction, and are the only two vessels afloat having the special improvements for which they are distinguished.

The whereabouts of C. A. Roberts, of Huron, Fresno County, is sought for by his wife. He left Huron about a month ago.

Merit Wins.
We desire to say to our citizens, that for years we have been selling Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Dr. King's New Life Pills, Buckley's Arnica Salve and Electric Bitters, and have never handled remedies that sell as well, or that have given such universal satisfaction. We do not hesitate to guarantee them every time, and we stand ready to refund the purchase price, if satisfactory results do not follow their use. These remedies have won their great popularity purely on their merits at Blossom & Black's.

It is an odd thing, muses Harper's Weekly, that no sooner has death claimed our friends for his own than we begin to say and do a multitude of things of little use at all then in comparison to that which they might have been had they come in advance of death. Then out of hand we flock to the house with offers of assistance and proffers of friendship; we rob our gardens and our hot-houses and send out flowers in profusion, and funeral wreaths and crosses and pillows and anchors and stars to encumbrance, and do all we can, though late, to hide and disguise and sweeten fate. But if we had flocked to the house while the dead could have been aware of it, how much pleasure and excitement and relief from monotonous or lonesome hours our sick friends might have enjoyed when all was a tiresome round of day and night and medicine and solitude, when a bunch of flowers brought in would have brought a light to the dull eyes of joy both over the gift and the giver, joy which no broken columns of tuberose and ivies, costing small fortunes, can bring to the eyes of the dead!

Even could we not have been admitted to the sick room itself, we could have brought there the murmur of the outside world by the mere knowledge given to the patient that we were within the gates, some break, some cheer, some good.

Then, too, how profuse we are with our good words after the ears are stopped with dust. We do not hesitate then to say all that is true, or even more than is true in praise of the departed. It is as if we had suddenly discovered in the sand a jewel fit for Kings to wear; we make an outcry and hold it up to the light and turn it this way and that and exclaim and marvel and admire and call on others to do likewise. There is nothing too much to say about this person now that the place one filled is vacant. But if we had said a tenth of it all when it might have been heard by the living person, of how much more worth it had been! What joy and satisfaction it might have given! the subject of it all might have felt as if not living in vain, as if satisfied to leave life with such appreciation. But it was not spoken, and life went out without it; and now we regret it, and do the same thing over with the next friend.

I sat by my girl at midnight kissing her lips by the hour; her father was watching through the keyhole with a visage grim and sour. I paused for breath, in rapture my feelings were awful queer, when her irate sour old father rushed in and grabbed my ear. How often, O, how often in the days that had gone by, had I tried the same little caper with young girls on the sly. But now that he had caught me, my ear was in his grasp; to my senses it quickly brought me when my throat was in his clasp; beneath my flapping coat skirts his foot he firmly set and sent me flying out of doors where the grass was cold and wet. How often, O, how often when I think of that sad night, does my blood boil and bubble spoiling for a fight. But when I still remember the keyhole in the door and how with kisses tender, mixed up with body sore, I took my meals while standing for days and weeks gone by, I resolve to stop up the keyhole before I kiss on the sly.

The working force of the Half-Moon mine, at Pioche, is to be increased to 25 men. About eight are working there at present, and accommodations will be provided by the end of the month for the remainder.
